

Sullivan County manager resigns

◆ Parting of ways: Board, administrator don't see eye to eye on how best to run the county in light of fiscal crisis.

By KRISTEN SENZ

Union Leader Correspondent

NEWPORT — Against a backdrop of escalating political infighting and a $2.2 million budget deficit, Sullivan County Manager Ed Gil de Rubio announced his resignation yesterday.

Gil de Rubio, who has held the top administrative post in Sullivan County for five and a half years, said his resignation, effective Jan. 1, will allow the Sullivan County Board of Commissioners to take the county in a different direction.

"The commissioners and I have a different direction as far as the day-to-day operations (of various county departments) and I respect that, but I also know what kind of manager I am, and I think it's time for me to leave so they can get on with their vision," he said.

Sullivan County finished the last fiscal year $2.2 million in the red, partly because anticipated nursing home revenue never materialized and partly because $1.2 million in capital expenditures were unexpectedly charged to the 2007 budget, Gil de Rubio said.

"We thought it was safe to spend those funds, but we found out during the audit that that was not the case,"

he said. "... I was relying on the accountants and the auditors to figure it out."

DE RUBIO

Gil de Rubio characterized his resignation as a mutual decision made with the commissioners, who were in the process of reviewing his job performance last week.

Sullivan County Commissioner Ben Nelson said the three-person board has now formulated an "interim approach" to county government in which the nursing home administrator and the director of the department of corrections will report directly to the commission.

Greg Chanis, who has been the county's director of facilities and operations for about three years, will be appointed to replace Gil de Rubio, Nelson said. Chanis doesn't have an accounting background, but the commissioners plan to bring in financial experts to help him, Nelson said.

"We basically see this as streamlining and cutting away a layer of bureaucracy," he said.

Nelson was reluctant to pin all the blame for the county's financial crisis on Gil de Rubio. "The budget was scrutinized by a lot of folks," he said. "There's a lot of blame to go around, and I don't want to single out any one person."

State representatives from Sullivan County said they weren't

► See Sullivan, Page B2

Sullivan

Continued From Page B1

surprised by the news of Gil de Rubio's resignation, given the tensions, personality conflicts and financial troubles that have plagued the county and its leaders in recent months.

State Rep. Tom Donovan, D-Claremont, said it wasn't until a month before the end of the fiscal year that delegates found out the county was millions of dollars, rather than a few hundred thousand dollars, in debt.

"There's a lot of unanswered questions, and we've been trying to get information for a long, long time from Ed and the administration, and I just hope he doesn't take that with him, and leave us to uncover the remnants of certain things," Donovan said.

In particular, Donovan said, he and other delegates question the administration of certain grant funds and payments to Genesis Health Care, the private company the county hired to run its nursing home in Unity. The county commissioners severed ties with Genesis earlier this year and recently hired Ted Purdy as nursing home administrator.

State Rep. Beverly Rodeschin, R-Newport, said the county needs a manager with a strong financial background. "Ed did not have one and he told people he did not have one," she said. "We've got to have somebody in that position who knows what they're doing, because if we don't have the right person in there, we're hitting the taxpayers."

Gil de Rubio said the highlights of his administration include the creation of the transitional housing unit at the county jail, where inmates can obtain jobs and life skills before their release, regional pandemic flu planning and improvements at the nursing home. He said he plans to continue working in public administration.